SUMMARY.

Field-Marshal Haig reports that there has been considerable aerial activity in the regions of Lens and Ypres.

Successful raids were carried out by the British south-east of Hargicourt and north of Ypres.

Intense bombardments preceded violent attacks by the Germans in four different sectors of the French front.

After desperate fighting, the enemy masses were driven off with heavy losses.

North and east of Laffaux Mill and east of Panthon, the French positions were entirely maintained.

Between Les Rovettes and Froidmont Farm the attack developed on a front of three kilometres.

After several hours' struggle the enemy was ejected from the first line, which they had penetrated.

The French brilliantly carried three strong gallients on the left bank of the Meuse.

M. Painleve, French Minister for War, says cruel trials await France, but she will surmount them, as she has done hitherto.

"Our allies," he added, "know that nothing will shake France. However rough the road may be, we will continue to the end."

Newspaper accounts agree that the German air raiders carried out their plans with amazing daring and coolness.

It is believed that the entire squadron was of the latest Albatross type, each carrying three men.

The authorities have not yet obtained a full report of the casualties and damage.

The raid has aroused the activity of those who favour reprisals, and it is understood the Government will reconsider its attitude.

The newspapers have a sterner tone in their criticism of the defences, and draw attention to France's lead in the way of reprisals.

Lord Montagu thinks the best way of shortening the war is to embark on a vast aerial offensive.

The Germans, in their official report of the raid, claim that all their aeroplanes returned, except one, which compulsorily descended.

A French communique announces that enemy aeroplanes raided the Nancy region on Friday and bombed a hospital.

Eighty-four French machines, on a series of brilliant operations, attacked towns in enemy territory by way of reprisals.

Advices from The Hague state that rioting occurred in Cologne, following a reduction of the meat ration.

Police and troops charged the crowds, and many people were wounded. The strictest martial law has been imposed.

An acute crisis, primarily attributed to alarm caused by the Russian offensive, has been reached in Germany.

The Reichstag Committee held a secret session and heatedly debated the country's war aims all day on Saturday.

The anti-annexationists and pan-Germans demanded the Government's adherence to their rival policies.

Four French steamers of over 1600 tons and four under that tonnage were sunk by submarines last week.

The Norwegian steamers Havbris and Bjerko have been sunk. Fourteen men of the Bjerko are missing.

A new German torpedo boat was mined and destroyed. There were only two survivors.

Russian official messages state that enemy counter-attacks at Godov and west of Koniuchi failed.

Fighting continues violently in Galicia. The Russians appear, from German communiques, to have won a victory near Stanislau.

An Austrian communique says that a Russian attack south-west of Zborov was repulsed with heavy loss.

Advices from Athens state that eight generals, 30 colonels, and 56 lieutenant-colonels have been placed on the retired list.

Mr. Holman has returned to London quite recovered from the accident on the West front.

The scientific services greatly impressed Mr. Holman, who is convinced that the war will be ultimately decided in the air.

The Governor's speech at the opening of the State Parliament next Tuesday may foreshadow an amendment of the Crown Lands Act.

The speech will probably also foreshadow amendments of the Arbitration Act and Crimes Act.

The twenty-fourth annual conference of the Farmers and Settlers' Association was held yesterday.

The president (Mr. Trethowan) predicted there would, in the near future, be the greatest industrial crisis Australia had ever known.

Mr. Beeby, who addressed the conference, believed big changes for the primary producers would be effected as a result of the war.

One of those changes would, he thought, be the passing away of the middleman, the farmer becoming the middleman himself.

The final session of the Queensland Parliament was opened yesterday.

It was stated that the Government proposed to extend the system of State butchers' shops.

The Queensland Government now owns 13 cattle stations, depasturing 126,000 head of stock.

Mr. Hughes presided at a meeting of the Commonwealth Advisory Council of Science and Industry yesterday.

It was stated the way had now been prepared for the establishment of a permanent institute of science and industry.

The tug Nyora has foundered in Bass Straits. The crew of sixteen are missing.

Further particulars regarding the disaster to the steamer Cumberland show that enormous damage was done by the explosions aboard.

The vessel is lying in a somewhat exposed position, and there is grave danger of her becoming a total wreck.

The ketch Vision has been wrecked on the Victorian coast, one of the crew being drowned.

Mr. Percival Brookfield, M.L.A., was fined £5 yesterday for using insulting words in the Domain.

The business commission which is inquiring into the administration of the Defence and Navy departments held its preliminary meeting yesterday.

Three candidates have been nominated for the Macquarie seat. The poll will be taken on Saturday, July 28.

A report on the medical inspection of school children has been furnished to the Minister for Education.

Last year 76,929 children were examined. Nearly 56 per cent. were found to be suffering from defects requiring treatment.

The industry section of the Royal Society discussed the question of securing increased efficiency last evening.

Mr. Poole, the principal speaker, laid stress on the point that scientific management was not opposed to unionism.

The 320th list of Australian war casualties, which was made available yesterday, contains 1218 names.

Of this total 90 have been killed in action, 998 wounded, 65 are prisoners of war, and 15 are reported missing.

In Victoria last week 227 recruits were accepted, as against 183 for the previous week.

Another strike occurred at Pelaw Main colliery, making the second within a week.

Trouble has occurred in the working of the mines in the Cober district on account of the engine-drivers and firemen's dispute.

The Randwick tramways workshops are still idle, and the position yesterday with regard to the trouble was unchanged.

Business opened rather quietly on the Sydney Stock Exchange yesterday. In mining scrip Kalgoorlie Mays Deeps had most attention.

There was a strong demand for eggs in the wholesale markets yesterday. New-laid eggs commanded 1s 6d to 1s 8d per dozen.

Forecast.—Fine and cold generally, excepting for some showers on the central and south-western slopes; cold westerly to north-westerly winds.

TIME.

Of all things, Time is the least appreciated until one realises that there is a limit to one's share of it.

Many a man is bound to realise the loss of opportunity—the chance to save substantially by a Sale Time purchase—when this Sale Time ends.

Saturday next is the last half shopping day, and after that on everything the usual prices will prevail.

These last five days are sure to be the most appreciated of the whole Sale period, as men begin to realise the limit of their share of Sale Time opportunity.

SNOW'S.

All around us we hear disturbing rumours of interrupted transportation and industries. Excuses and explanations of why the things the people want cannot be had, and why new fashions are scarce and indefinite.

But here is at least one Store that is going straight ahead, gathering the best that is to be had from the most reliable sources.

means, to everyone dear, that goods are scarce, and prices higher as a consequence, but we have a duty to perform in keeping the store fresh and attractive with new merchandise, and we shall devote the whole of our resources to fulfilling that duty.

SOME SOUND SAVINGS FROM SNOW'S SPECIALTY SILK SHOP.

Only the fact that we looked ahead and ordered these goods many months ago makes the present good values possible. In fact, we are likely to ever have such a fine range of fabrics to show you, in the face of shortages everywhere. But here they are, and now is the time to buy.

BLACK TAFFETAS, 36 TO 40 INS., ARE 6/11, 7/11, 8/11 AT SNOW'S.
40-INCH BLACK PAILLETTE MOUSSELINE DE SOIE 8/11, AND 9/11 AT SNOW'S.
WHITE 40-INCH BLACK CREPE-DE-CHINES MAY BE HAD AT 4/11, 5/11, 6/11, 7/11, AND 8/11.

THE SCARCE BLACK VELVETEENS are certainly not scarce at Snow's. You can choose from a very fine range—and there are no bad bargains amongst them. SNOW'S PRICES, 2/11½, 3/6½, 3/11½, 4/6, 4/11, 5/6, 5/11, 6/6.
36 TO 40 INCH BLACK CHIFFON VELVET is 14/11, 15/11, 17/11, 19/11, and 21/ at Snow's.

What the Leaders of Australia say:—

SENATOR MILLEN:—
"Every Australian must be deeply interested, and those who see the pictures will be stirred by the wonderful reproduction of the heroic deeds in which Australia's sons have played such a splendid part. These pictures are actual war scenes taken by authority of the Imperial Government. They have the dramatic force of reality. Music of the Allied Countries

RUSSIA

"Dance of the Automatons," By Tschaikowsky

THIS is one of the most fanciful and fascinating numbers in Tschaikowsky's "Nutcracker Suite." The droll spirit of humour that animates the music has been admirably caught in the above drawing by Mr. Shepperson, the famous "Punch" artist.

At night-fall in a Russian toy-maker's shop the quaintly-carved dolls come to life and to the accompaniment of toy instruments their rigid limbs relax into the movements of an eccentric and characteristic dance.

It is intensely interesting to interpret this little piece by means of the 'Pianola' Piano; the exclusive expression devices enable you to give the fullest rein to your imagination, and at the same time provide you with an exact guide to the composer's intentions.

MAKE YOUR OWN COUGH MIXTURE.

12/- worth for 2/-

The cost of cough mixture usually amounts to a considerable sum in the average family; but it need not necessarily do so, as anyone can, in a few moments, make as fine a quality Cough, Cold, and Sore Throat Remedy as money can buy. All that has to be done to make a pint of mixture is to obtain a bottle of HEENZO (Hean's Essence) and dilute it with water and sweeten according to easy directions printed on the label. A pint of ordinary remedies would cost at least 12s. HEENZO (Hean's Essence) costs only 2s (by post, 2s 3d).

THE QUALITY OF THE MIXTURE MADE FROM HEENZO IS CERTIFIED TO BY

received from well-known citizens, who assert that it is the finest preparation ever used by them for ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, CATARRH, WHOOPING COUGH, INFLUENZA, AND SORE THROATS.

MADAME ANTONIA DOLORES, the celebrated soprano:—

"I am delighted to acknowledge the value of HEENZO COUGH DIAMONDS. I found them agreeable to take and very efficient.

"It gives me great pleasure to know that such a valuable remedy is manufactured in Australia. Kindly let me have half a dozen boxes."

MADAME KATE ROONEY, the gifted dramatic contralto:—

"Having frequently used HEENZO and HEENZO COUGH DIAMONDS, I am glad to be able to recommend them, as I found them an excellent throat tonic. They have all the soothing qualities most helpful to sore throat and vocal fatigue."

Mr. WILLIAM HOLMAN, Sen., Professor of Elocution at the Government Conservatorium of Music, and father of the Premier of New South Wales:—

"I have been taking HEENZO (Hean's Essence) Mixture for a few days, and am still continuing with it. I appreciate its beneficial effects, and can testify to its being a very excellent medicine for inflammation of the pharynx and similar complaints—bronchitis, for example. HEENZO COUGH DIAMONDS are also very efficacious, and handy to carry in the vest pocket for taking occasionally when one feels a little hoarse or husky."

Mr. REG. V. CAYCE, Sales Manager for the Studebaker Corporation:—

"When I sent round a few days ago for a bottle of HEENZO it was because I had an attack of grippe that almost made me feel (like Mark Twain when he got too sick) afraid that I wouldn't die. My object in writing you this note is to tell you that a few hours after HEENZO had got to its good work I changed my mind about wishing I were dead, and my voice, instead of coming out in whereas, was of such persuasive smoothness that I was easily able to convince a prospect that he needed a Studebaker just as badly as I had, a little while previously, needed Heenzo. Your preparation will henceforth find a treasured place in my family medicine chest."

SIR ERNEST H. SHACKLETON, the celebrated Antarctic Explorer, wrote:—

"A parcel of HEAN'S ESSENCE went South on the ship Aurora on my recent Antarctic Expedition, and was used by members of the Ross Sea party, who found the remedy of value under the exceedingly severe conditions experienced in the Ross Sea."

Rev. GEORGE WALTERS, of the Hyde Park Unitarian Church, Sydney:—

"Dear Sir,—I have much pleasure in letting you know that when a severe cold caught me in its grip last year nothing was so effective in checking and finally curing it as a free and constant use of HEENZO (Hean's Essence). I have also found that HEAN'S COUGH DIAMONDS are excellent for the throat, and would not like to be without them. Please send me a further supply of both the Essence and the Diamonds."

Mr. NELSON ILLINGWORTH, the Celebrated Sculptor.

"I wish to convey to you my appreciation of your wonderful HEENZO (Hean's Essence) and HEENZO COUGH DIAMONDS, which have been a boon to me, an asthmatical subject. In the arduous work of sculpturing and modelling one almost incessantly contracts colds, owing to the dampness of the clay and other materials used. I have found your preparations far and away superior to anything else ever used by me, and I have no hesitation in recommending HEENZO to my professional friends here and abroad."

MESSRS. JOYCE and WILD, two members of Sir Ernest Shackleton's party, sent the following jointly signed letter:—

"You will be interested to know that we used your celebrated HEAN'S ESSENCE during our recent Antarctic Expedition. We found it an admirable preparation. Its cold-relating properties are very pronounced; its soothing and healing action is excellent, and as a cough and cold remedy we think it should be kept in every home."

INDUSTRIAL ARBITRATION COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Heydon.)

GLASS AND BOTTLE MAKERS' STRIKE.

Recently the Minister for Labour and Industry instituted proceedings against a large number of men for taking part in a strike at the Waterloo glass works. After the hearing His Honor reserved judgment.

The matter was again before the Court yesterday, when Mr. Maxwell appeared for the Minister, and Mr. Macatta, instructed by Mr. E. R. Abigail, for the respondents. Mr. Macatta stated that the men had all gone back to work. It had been decided to have a conference in Melbourne on Tuesday. If a settlement were not then arrived at, the matter would be referred to an independent arbitrator.

His Honor said that the men who had been summoned went on strike to help strikers in another State. The result was that heavy loss had been inflicted on the employers. The Court was now told that the men had gone back to work—not because of any decision of the Court, but because an agreement had been arrived at to hold a conference. In effect, they had returned to work pending something that might result from the conference. His Honor said that he was disappointed that the men had not gone back absolutely. He found each man guilty of striking, but he postponed till the 30th inst. the imposition of a penalty, in the hope that something more favourable than at present would occur.

WHEAT CARRIERS AND LUMPERS.

This was a reference to the Court by the Minister for Labour and Industry. Mr. G. W. Walker appeared for the Government Wheat Shippers, Mr. A. S. Mackenzie for the Primary Producers, and Mr. L. Armstrong for the Australian Workers' Union. Recently his Honor gave a decision which covered the mice-infested wheat districts. The present reference to the Court related to big stacks of wheat, which, to escape weevils, had been transferred to Goulburn. His Honor ruled that Goulburn was not a district which was mice-infested, and, therefore, did not come within the jurisdiction of his award for such districts.

(Before Judge Curlewis.)

CROSS APPEALS.

In connection with the Professional and Shop Workers' Group, No. 3 (Shop Assistants), cross appeals were made by the Hotel, Club, Caterers' and Restaurant Employees' Union, and by the Caterers and Restaurant-keepers' Association. Mr. D. Guihen appeared for the employees, and Mr. Phillip Hart for the employers.

The appeals are part heard.

CLERKS.

Mr. R. Broomfield, instructed by Messrs. Norton, Smith, and Co., appeared for the Master Retailers' Association in an application for a variation of the award of the Professional and Shop Workers' Group, No. 3 (Clerks). Mr. M. J. Connington appeared for the Federated Clerks' Union.

His Honor reserved his decision.

COURT OF CRIMINAL APPEAL.

(Before Mr. Justice Street, Mr. Justice Sly, and Mr. Justice Gordon.)

THE KATOOMBA MURDER.

Rex v Shaw.

Mr. Breckenridge, instructed by Mr. H. E. M'Intosh, appeared for prisoner on the appeal and the application for leave to appeal; and Mr. C. A. White for the Crown to oppose. The prisoner, Herbert Keith Shaw, was tried before Mr. Justice Pring and a jury of 12, at the Central Criminal Court in June last, on an indictment charging him with the murder of George Henry King, at Katoomba, on May 4 last. The jury returned a verdict of guilty, with a recommendation to mercy on the ground that prisoner's mental faculties were below normal. He was sentenced to death, and now appealed on the grounds which have already been stated. Affidavits were now read to show that Robert M'Lean, uncle of prisoner, died in an insane asylum in Tasmania about 19 years ago, aged 44 years, and that of this fact prisoner was not aware at the trial or before. He did not know it until June 22, when his father informed him of the fact. Mr Breckenridge having finished his argument-in-chief, Mr. C. A. White replied, and referring to the grounds of appeal based as to the evidence given by Detective Devlin, in reply to the foreman of the jury, he referred the Court to the decision of the Full Court in Rex v Reeve and of the High Court in Rex v Peacock. He contended further that no exception could fairly be taken to certain remarks by his Honor to the jury, which formed the basis of other grounds submitted by prisoner.

Mr. Breckenridge having replied,

Mr. Justice Street delivered the judgment of the Court, and said that the first ground of appeal was that the presiding Judge was in error in allowing the foreman of the jury to ask Detective Devlin if he had made inquiries as to the purchase of the hammer with which the murder was unquestionably committed. The evidence, being merely hearsay, was clearly inadmissible, and Mr. Justice Pring at once said to the jury, "I doubt if I have stopped you, because the inquiries Devlin made are really not evidence in the case." The Court had no hesitation in saying that the mere fact that inadmissible evidence was tendered in the course of a trial did not necessarily render the whole trial abortive. There was no doubt that the warning to the jury should be stated as soon as possible after the inadmissible evidence had been given, and in the present case Mr. Justice Pring did warn the jury promptly. But it was contended that the warning was not sufficiently emphatic to be sufficient to deter the jury from taking the evidence into consideration during their deliberations. It might be that the warning should have been couched in more emphatic terms, but the Court was of opinion that it was sufficiently emphatic, clear, and precise to impress upon the jury that they must dismiss from their minds the evidence improperly brought before them. The Court, therefore, had no hesitation in saying, having regard to the terms of his Honor's warning, and the fact that it was given immediately after the evidence, that the jury were left in no doubt as to what their duty was in the matter.

The Court was also of opinion that the objection as to his Honor's direction as to the amount of evidence on the question of insanity failed, and that it was based upon a misapprehension of what his Honor said to the jury. In reference to the next ground of appeal bearing upon Mr. Justice Pring's direction in regard to Dr. Campbell's evidence, it was not a misdirection in point of law, but at the most a misstatement of fact, and counsel for the accused should have called the attention of the Judge to it; but, in any case, the matter was quite immaterial, because the discussion was not in regard to the temporary insanity of the prisoner, but reneral insanity, based upon the family history of prisoner. For these reasons, that ground also failed. The Court was further of opinion that the two other grounds, alleging misdirection, had not been established, and on the point as to the Crown not calling certain witnesses who were bound over to appear, prisoner's counsel, if he thought the evidence necessary, could have applied for and obtained an adjournment, in order to ensure the attendance of the witnesses. If he had expressed such a desire to the Crown, no doubt the witnesses would have been forthcoming.

As to the application for leave to appeal on the ground that prisoner desired to call further evidence as to family history on the question of insanity, the Court was of opinion that, as the evidence referred to might have had some effect upon the opinion of medical experts as to appellant's responsibility, and its absence might have had some effect upon the finding of the jury, and as the Court was not in possession of the precise nature of the evidence sought to be obtained, or what bearing it might have upon the result, and, further, having regard to the seriousness of the crime and the serious consequences following upon the verdict, the appellant should have an opportunity of placing before the proper tribunal anything that he could adduce on the defence of insanity, the Court thought it should not dismiss the application for leave to appeal merely upon the scanty information before it, but should grant an adjournment for a reasonable time, in order to give appellant, if he could do so, an opportunity of bringing forward the actual evidence which he said would be available. The Court, therefore, adjourned the further hearing of the application for leave to appeal until next term, when appellant must be prepared with affidavits showing the details of the evidence he wished to call upon the point.

All grounds of appeal dismissed, and application for leave to appeal on the ground that fresh evidence could be obtained on the question of insanity to stand over till after vacation.

MEMBER OF PARLIAMENT FINED.

At the Central Summons Court yesterday Percival Brookfield was proceeded against on a charge of having used insulting words to the Domain, Sydney, on July 1. The subject of the charge was that defendant used the following words:—"The Domain to-day is full of pimps and spies. I see there is a police pimp and spy taking notes of this meeting, with the object of trying to put working class agitators behind prison bars. No doubt, he is the child of some working-class woman, and she looked upon him with pride at some time in his life. But by —— she must be proud of him now. Every one of these pimps and spies are renegades, and belong to the working class."

Sergeant G. Brown, in evidence, said that he attended a meeting of the Anti-Conscription League, at which there were about 3000 people present. He took shorthand notes of the defendant's speech. Defendant used the words mentioned in the charge, and the effect of them was that the attention of everyone in the vicinity of witness was directed towards him. Witness said that he felt insulted because of the reference to his mother. Witness denied that he inserted the word "police." He considered that the whole of defendant's speech was disgraceful for a member of Parliament.

Detective O'Reilly said that the words complained of were an insult to him as a police officer.

Percival Brookfield said that he lived at Broken Hill, and was a member of Parliament. The remarks he had made dealt with the extraordinary unrest in society on account of the war. He had said on the day in question that any man who mentioned peace was a traitor to his country or a German. Most civil laws were gone by the board, and the War Precautions Act had taken their place. Defendant admitted that he made use of the following utterances:—"Intolerance reigns supreme even in this vast audience; there are pimps and spies here with the object of doing their best to place working-class agitators behind the prison bars; wonderful to me, these men belong to the working class, and no doubt their mothers looked on them with pride at one time of their life; by ——, they would be proud of them now."

Witness said he did not use the words "police pimps." He had never abused the police at any meeting he had attended. In fact, at Broken Hill, Inspector Miller, in the case of a riot there, swore that defendant assisted him to maintain law and order at risk of great personal injury.

The magistrate (Mr. Smithers) remarked that the notes from which defendant had spoken and which had been tendered by him as evidence, would have taken about seven minutes to speak, while the evidence had shown that the defendant had spoken for half an hour; hence the defendant must have spoken more words than were in the notes.

Defendant was fined £5, with 6/ costs, in default one month's imprisonment with hard labour. He was also ordered to enter into a recognisance to be of good behaviour for 12 months, in default one month's imprisonment.

THE ADVENTURES OF MARMADUKE CLEGG IN THE YEAR 1688.

BY MORICE GERARD.

[ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.]

The whole thing was so sinister, so suggestive of crime, of concealment, so carefully contrived and so quickly carried out, that it roused our interest more than any ordinary fracas in the street would have done.

Captain Destrier added to my curiosity and perplexity; he stood on the edge of the path, as near as he could to the water without falling in, and looked over the wall until he could see the chimneys of the big house which lay at the back, some th. ty or forty yards from the outer wall of the garden.

"It is cursed strange," he exclaimed.

"What is strange?" I asked.

"I know the house well; it belongs to the Earl of Bedford, who is a distant connection of mine, my mother being a Russell."

"What of that?" I said.

"The Earl is away, and the house empty, except for a gardener or caretaker possibly."

"I should like to see over that wall," I remarked.

"'Tis easily done," he responded. "There are buttresses at intervals. I will stand on one of them, you can climb on my shoulder, and your head will then be above the level of the parapet."

We carried his suggestion out in a few seconds. I made some little noise in swinging myself to the top of the wall; it attracted the attention of a dog, which came bounding towards me, barking vigorously. Beyond this I could see nothing.

No doubt the party who had entered had had time to reach the door of the house. The gardens were terraced and laid out with great care; in one corner close to the boundary wall was a summer house of more than usual size. These were the details which remained fixed in my memory.

I expected every minute someone would come from the house to ascertain the reason of the dog's furious barking as he leapt up the wall trying to get at me. But nothing happened, the house was dark and sombre, to all appearances deserted; the baying of the hound only served to emphasise the environing silence.

Shortly after that I took a boat for home, having parted with Captain Destrier. I had practically forgotten the whole circumstance until the appeal and conversation by the river brought it afresh to my memory. I had not the slightest doubt that the fracas of the previous night, at which Destrier and I had almost assisted, and the abduction of the lady's brother had to do with one and the same thing. If so, the clue to the mystery and the hiding place of the man carried off were alike to be found in that mansion belonging to the Earl of Bedford, which lay so handy to the tideway of the Thames.

I sat for the best part of an hour cogitating; then I slapped my thigh; I laughed aloud. The whole plan of campaign had come to me; some parts of it tickled my humour.

I summoned my servant, Tom Oldgate, and gave him certain instructions, without any explanation as to their reason. He had the virtue of implicit obedience, to ask*ing* neither the why nor the wherefore, a quality only acquired in military service.

Before carrying out my instructions as to the purchase of certain articles, he was to take a note to Captain Destrier, at his lodgings, which I now sat down to write.

It ran as follows:—

"Honoured and Dear Friend,—Something has come to my knowledge which may explain certain circumstances on the Thames bank, which have given me some perplexity last night. I shall be glad of your assistance in unravelling the mystery, and of doing some slight service to a young gentleman, who appears to have been hardly dealt by.

"If you will do me the honour to sup with me at the Three Tuns at 6 of the clock to-night, I will explain further.

"Your faithful obedient Servant,

"MARMADUKE CLEGG."

Before starting for this appointment I dressed myself quietly, putting a mask in the pocket of my doublet. Just as I was ready, Tom returned; he had carried out my instructions to the letter, and had also brought a verbal message from Destrier to the effect that he would be at the Three Tuns at the appointed hour.

I was afraid to take Lee out at night, lest he should get a chill after taking physic, so I bade Tom hire me another horse for my own riding, to spare one to be led, and to bring up the back he rode himself.

We started some half-hour later. Tom brought up the rear with the led horse. We took the journey at a leisurely pace, having plenty of time. The horses were left at some livery stables, near the Three Tuns, at which I arrived on the stroke of 6.

Destrier and I supped at a table by ourselves, but the room was too full, and other tables too adjacent, for private conversation

Supper finished, we sat for some time over our wine. I was in no hurry, for the matter in hand did not admit of being carried out until comparative darkness had supervened.

The evening was cloudy and overcast, a smell of rain in the air, but fortunately it had not actually come, or my plans would have been interfered with.

We sallied forth from the tavern at half-past seven; the time I had fixed for Tom to be in attendance.

"I have brought my man with me," I said to Destrier, "he will be useful in the affair we have in hand."

I signalled to Tom to walk behind us, a few paces apart.

We took the same route as on the previous night. When we reached the tow-path it was already getting dusk, owing more to the dark evening than to the actual time of the day.

I glanced at the river, gave a grunt of satisfaction; some two hundred yards from the bank I could see the outlines of a large vessel, such as was used for traffic to America and the West Indies.

The Government sent not a few convicts, at this period, to be sold for service on the plantations in Virginia and elsewhere. In addition to these more legitimate carcnes I was aware that not infrequently owners and captains of vessels plying to *plan*e countries, received a capitation money for men whose relatives had reason for wishing to get rid of someone obnoxious to them. Something told me that this was to be the destiny assigned to the unfortunate young man for whom I was questing by those who captured him, in the place of the more agreeable duel of bridegroom, which he had planned for himself.

My blood boiled to think of the outrage thus contemplated, that a gentleman of refinement and position, such as I was sure the brother of my friend in the mask would be, should be destined in cold blood for the degraded life of a slave in the new world.

I would prevent this at the risk of my own life if need be, and if in doing so I could avenge the foul undertaking I should be the happier man. But I was afraid, as proved to be the case, the real perpetrators of the crime would not allow themselves to appear in so risky a matter.

We reached the small gate in the boundary wall of my Lord Bedford's property. It was locked, as on the previous occasion; the tow-path was absolutely deserted, and there were no signs of life within the garden.

Tom Oldgate had brought with him a preparation for the dog, something which it would devour eagerly, and having eaten would collapse for some time. This was preferable to doing the brute an injury, which would have been inevitable had the dog attacked us.

As on the previous night, I scaled the wall with the assistance of the buttress and Destrier's shoulder. Tom was carrying a sack over his shoulder, which I could tell stimulated Destrier's curiosity, although he asked no questions.

Nothing was to be seen or heard; the house stood up shadowy and silent in the backerround; the outlines of the summerhouse, which was nearer, stood out more distinctly. The darkness deepened momentarily. The quiet of the garden and the gloom of the house affected us. I fancied that eyes watched me, that stealthy forms moved among the fruit trees, which occupied a large part of the space.

ARMY CONTRACTOR CHARGED

Before Mr. Clarke, S.M., at the Central Police Court yesterday, Joseph Henry, of the West End Laundry, Bay-road, Glebe, was proceeded against on an information alleging that defendant had falsely pretended that 27,901 blankets, the property of the Commonwealth, had been properly washed and dried, and in a fit condition for issue to the Defence Department, as required by a contract between Phillip Henry and General Ramaciotti, District Commandant of the Commonwealth; and by means of such false pretence unlawfully attempted to obtain £222/19/2. Defendant was further charged with destroying 14 blankets, the property of the Commonwealth Government.

Before starting for this appointment I dressed myself quietly, putting a mask in the pocket of my doublet. Just as I was ready, Tom returned; he had carried out my instructions to the letter, and had also brought a verbal message from Destrier to the effect that he would be at the Three Tuns at the appointed hour.

I was afraid to take Lee out at night, lest he should get a chill after taking physic, so I bade Tom hire me another horse for my own riding, to spare one to be led, and to bring up the back he rode himself.

We started some half-hour later. Tom brought up the rear with the led horse. We took the journey at a leisurely pace, having

Mr. Windeyer, instructed by the Commonwealth Crown Solicitor, appeared for the prosecution, and Mr. Harold Morgan for the defence.

Defendant, who reserved his defence, was committed for trial on both counts, bail being allowed.

ON THE LAND.

FARMERS CONFER.

The conference this year may be considered the most important yet held by the Farmers and Settlers' Association. That organisation has secured a portion of direct political power, and that, coming during a period of great national stress, entails corresponding responsibility. The political situation of the association is of considerable interest. There is a section amongst its members that would prefer stronger measures to maintain a pronounced identity in politics, and there are those who would prefer less politics and more attention to the working side of the farmer's life, although it is difficult to separate them to-day. As a large number of delegates had not arrived yesterday the political motions on the business paper were held over, and will be discussed this afternoon. As there is a desire on the part of some members to have the "political position defined," and that is not the easiest matter always in these days, when history is made so rapidly, and there are varied shades of political opinion represented, an interesting, if not strenuous, discussion may be anticipated. But it can be depended upon that there will be absolute and resolute unanimity in opposition to the Labour party, particularly as it stands to-day. The primary producer is dissatisfied with much that is done by the Government and Government departments, but the greatest of these grievances dwarfs in comparison with his feelings towards the industrial "go-slow" party that is so manifestly active at the present time. The necessity of a united front at the present time means, therefore, unswerving support to the alliance with the National party, which had such gratifying results at the last election. The president in his address enumerated the most important matters that will occupy the attention of the conference, and regarding which some forcible and direct remarks by the country men present are a certainty. As the general secretary stated in his report, it has been a strenuous year for the association and its members. The wheat position probably will be the most prominent question, and the strong criticism contained in the annual rep.. will be more than echoed by the men who have had a first-hand experience of the working of the State Wheat Office. Another subject that no doubt will find expression is the recent shearers' award. Although the general secretary yesterday explained to the conference that the farmers were not bound by the award, which applied only to the actual respondents, the delegates fully realise that they will be indirectly affected, and the president has warned them that they may expect to be called upon to fight a claim by the rural workers in the same court, and perhaps

THE ATTACKS ON THE FRENCH.

The latest debate in the Chamber of Deputies will confirm the opinion widely held of M. Painleve that he is the ablest and the most statesmanlike of all the Ministers who have served France during the present war. Since he first took a distinguished part in the control of the Government he has displayed in a remarkable degree all the qualities that were most needed by France in her present crisis—firmness of purpose, keen sympathy with the anxieties of his fellow-deputies, appreciation of the national character, and great intellectual distinction. His firmness of purpose has been demonstrated in two crises, of which the first led to the defeat of M. Viviani, and the second to the resignation of M. Briand. He took office under M. Briand because a place had been found for his great scientific and organising ability as Minister for Inventions. He resigned when it was thought that M. Briand's hesitations had lost him the confidence of the nation, and he refused to accept the reorganisation of the Ministry as the necessary change. The resignation of General Lyautey, followed by that of M. Briand, has given him the opportunity which has proved the man. He found the French Parliament profoundly anxious for both the military and the economic future of the country. In the majority there was no thought of wavering from the national purpose, but throughout Parliament there was a lack of confidence in the forethought and decision of Ministers. Failure to provide for supplies of food and coal, together with an extravagant use of the censorship, had aroused profound ill-feeling against M. Briand among the most active deputies, as well as among the extreme Socialists. General Lyautey, the second man in the Cabinet, had antagonised the deputies by his refusal to take them into his confidence. M. Painleve, in his first speech as Minister for War, showed his Parliamentary skill as well as the advantage which he derived from his socialistic opinions. His task was to carry a proposal to call up the 1918 class immediately against two amendments, one to postpone it indefinitely, and the other to wait until the agricultural work of May and June had been completed. He met the first by a full recognition of the sacrifice which the summons of mere school boys meant to the country, and the second by an assurance that agriculture would be safeguarded by the release of the older men and the despatch of a sufficient number of peasant soldiers at the busier seasons. To both he opposed the vital necessities of the French Army, and both were defeated by majorities which testified at once to his persuasiveness and to the patriotism of the nation. In the debate which we report this morning the same qualities are apparent. The Minister personifies the spirit in which the nation has borne all its losses, but he recognises the temper of a Parliament which, since the wars of the revolution, has never allowed itself to be dissociated from military or diplomatic affairs. It cannot be said that the nation would have borne its losses with less fortitude under any other Minister. But there are precedents such as the debates which followed the first surprise at Verdun to suggest that no other Minister would have been able to reconcile the Chamber to accept its own disappointments, and to hear a confession of mistakes with so little anger against the Government and the Commander-in-Chief.

It is clear from this debate, and from a recent speech of M. Painleve, that the French in their offensive not only lost heavily but lost more heavily than they could afford. Quite probably the leaders never expected to attain the important strategical results which were suggested by many of the commentators. The public were taught to hope for the liberation of a great deal of French territory, and for the envelopment of the southern end of the line which had been surrounded on the north by the British at Arras. The military leaders knew that they would have enough difficulty in the tactical objects immediately ahead. They had to seize a number of positions chosen at leisure by the Germans which had defied both the British and French armies before they had been artificially strengthened. Though they failed to take the height which looks over Reims, they succeeded in the majority of instances, and gained command of the line of heights which divide the valley of the Aisne and the Ailette. If the design of the military authorities had corresponded with popular expectations they would then have pressed to attack another line of heights almost equally formidable. M. Painleve has already explained that the losses incurred and the increased strength of the Germans have compelled them to wait for assistance. But the very strength of the German counter-attacks has provided the French commanders with a justification almost as important as a further advance. They have certainly tested the value of Hindenburg's strategic reserve, and in all probability have answered the counter offensive which was to have been his final reply to the Allies in the West. The Germans have obviously concentrated their strength in an effort to recover lost ground both on the heights of the Aisne and at Verdun. In both places they have gained a temporary success. But everywhere they have failed in the end before that combination of physical and moral courage with audacity and precision which has made France the miracle of the war. It is too early yet to suppose that the enemy attacks will not be repeated. We can, however, feel confident that the enemy will gain nothing for which he has not paid ten times over. The French will not advance again until their preparations are complete. Then they will continue to employ the tactics of the economy of life, which they introduced at Verdun and on the Somme, and have taught to the British. It is to be hoped that in that advance they will still feel the benefit of the Russian offensive as they will certainly have the co-operation of the British. It was the Russian inactivity that set free troops for counter-attacks, and it is these counter-attacks that have delayed both the French and British armies. If Russia were to fall again France would remain as proud and determined as ever, but happily the indications are that Russia is pressing on with greater vigour and continued success.

INDUSTRIAL TROUBLE.

As though to show that the recent elections in State and Commonwealth have not decided anything, those who control the industrial organisation in this and in other States are steadily putting pressure upon the community. The result is to be seen in strikes or in threats to strike which affect public utilities like coal and wheat and great producing interests as represented by wool. Union concentration and consolidation go on all the time; and the gathering of power into the hands of a few irresponsible men is being completed as if for some day of demonstration or destruction. A general strike directly will be upon us, if the signs are being read aright; and the community may as well face the possibility of a serious dislocation in the midst of war—the unionists, in fact, taking sides with our enemies. This is the plain English about a very disquieting situation. It would be foolish to disguise the danger in which we stand in Australia at the present moment. The recent elections, no doubt, have been reassuring to the extent that a majority of the electors has taken sides against the P.L.L. and its I.W.W. sympathisers; but we must not forget that the minority is strong, militant, and ready for mischief. No considerations of loyalty to the Empire seem to count beside the chance of causing an industrial upheaval. This may be by way of revenge for the political reverses recently experienced, and for the purpose of asserting a purely revolutionary authority through the unions. The war thus gives an opportunity instead of refusing one. It is difficult to use moderate language when contemplating such a condition of things in a British community. We could understand the position if unemployment were being quoted as a cause of unrest. There is unemployment, of course; but in the industries concerned at the present moment the demand for workers exceeds the supply. The trouble cannot arise from that source. In coal-mining there is a market for every ton that can be hewn and raised to the pit's mouth; and in the pastoral industry no one can say that the shearers have failed to get substantial advances through the awards of the Arbitration Court. They have done so well that one marvels at difficulties which have arisen—except as the real reason is to be found in the fact that no award will satisfy unions bent on forcing a crisis.

How serious the position is may be seen in the grave words of the president of the Farmers and Settlers' Association in his speech at the opening of the annual conference yesterday. The man on the land realises better than anybody what the present friction may bring; and he has shown such determined loyalty in the enlistment of his young manhood that he is naturally inclined to think that he is a special object of attack. But the Acting Premier of the State last week spoke even more decidedly when he declared that the stoppages of work which are causing so much anxiety "are being engineered by men who want to keep up the industrial ferment." The city as well as the country is affected. War and not peace is in the mind of the unionist leaders, if this be true, and Mr. Fuller said that the community must face the strike menace. In one direction the Government and private individuals are being prevented from building up any stocks of coal, and in another the output of work in Government concerns is being steadily reduced. Said Mr. Fuller:—"We cannot get our wool, wheat, or minerals, the production of which is the mainstay of Australia, to foreign markets. The financial stringency is rapidly increasing. The war is now at its most critical stage. It is appalling that at such times as these we have to face constant stoppages of work in different industries arising from the actions of men who seem determined to bring about a serious industrial crisis." When one in the seat of authority speaks like this the outlook is dark indeed, and the moment has certainly come for the public to begin to study ways and means. Ultimately, no doubt, it must be the concern of the Federal Government. Indeed it is now the concern of Mr. Hughes and his colleagues, because they have to keep faith with the men at the front and with the Empire. The trial of strength which is approaching is part of the war itself. In our midst is a body of men who are determined that Australia shall not do her fair share of the fighting against Germany; and while we decline to believe that a majority of the unionists still in the Commonwealth would vote for Germany in a secret ballot, the question before us is whether, if the men now controlling the unions called a general strike, there would be a decisive protest within the unions. Many loyal unionists are restless and unhappy over the turn things have taken. Some have voted against P.L.L. candidates, and not a few have enlisted to make their protest more emphatic. But when things come to a crisis, as they must if the present situation develops, will unionists break or blindly follow their leaders? The leaders are not quite sure, perhaps; but if public opinion is strong and determined now, it will help materially to draw the sensible men together on the right side. Our business as a people is to fight Germany, and those who are found against the community on this issue will be adjudged friends of Germany and traitors to the Empire.

DEFENCE COMMISSION.

MELBOURNE, Monday.

A preliminary meeting of the business commission appointed by the Federal Ministry to inquire into the administration of the Defence and Navy Departments was held to-day. Members interviewed the Minister for Defence (Senator Pearce), and the heads of the Defence Department, and afterwards discussed amongst themselves the procedure to be adopted. In a statement made this afternoon the chairman (Mr. W. G. M'Beath) said that it was proposed to make an inspection of all the organisations of the Defence Department, both military and naval. The accounting and paying systems would be inquired into, as would the methods employed in other departments. The commission would also visit military camps, small arms, and other factories, and naval bases in Victoria and the other States, principally New South Wales and Queensland.

FIJIANS AND THE WAR.

COOTAMUNDRA, Monday.

In a lecture to the member of the local Literary Institute, the Rev. Wallace Deane, M.A., B.D., who was for some years a Methodist missionary in Fiji, said the Fijians were exceedingly loyal. "They are," he continued, "an integral part of the British Empire, and are proud of it. (Applause.) They believe in the British Government, and they long to learn the English tongue. When the war broke out there was an intense wave of loyalty all over the islands. They dipped their hands into their pockets—metaphorically speaking, for they have no pockets (laughter)—and gave £15,000 or £16,000. (Applause.) They want Britain to win. Several aeroplanes, now in use in the west, were bought by the Fijians. Several motor ambulances were given by them. And I feel sure you will be pleased to know that, although not allowed to send soldiers, they have been allowed to send a hundred men to go behind the lines and work in the transport services. (Applause.) And if a thousand of them are wanted, they can be got." (Renewed applause.)

"AUSTRALIANS IN ACTION."

Senator Millen anticipates that several thousand pounds will be returned to the Australian Repatriation Fund as a result of the exhibition throughout Australia of the "Australia in Action" films, purchased by the Commonwealth Government as being the only pictorial record of the activities of our troops and the tanks at Pozieres. "The pictures are actual war scenes taken by authority of the Imperial Government," said Mr. Millen, "and every Australian will be stirred by the reproduction of the heroic deeds in which Australia's sons have played such a splendid part. Every one who sees them will have the added satisfaction of knowing that he or she will be contributing to the fund for the repatriation of our soldiers."

The Sydney season of the films commences at the Town Hall on July 16.

THE MAILS.

Mails for the United Kingdom will close at the General Post Office at 5.30 p.m. on Friday next.

RE-EDUCATION IN FRANCE.

One of the most appropriate, as well as one of the most valuable of the many gifts now on sale for the benefit of the French Red Cross, is a pamphlet inscribed with the title "Providing for Disabled Soldiers: What France has Done." It is a reprint of a report prepared under instructions from the British Minister for War by Sir Henry Norman, who for some time represented the Ministry of Munitions at the headquarters of the French Ministry for Inventions. It was a happy thought to devote the proceeds of sale to a French fund, for the pamphlet represents one of the many precious gifts of France to the civilisation of to-day and to-morrow. It is a summary of what is being done in France to prepare soldiers who have been crippled in the war to resume their old place in civil life or to take a new one. The French plans have naturally been devised to suit the character of the French soldier and the distribution of industry in France. But the thought which inspires them is a model of universal application and the ease with which they may be applied to the circumstances of other countries is very clearly indicated by the author. Sir Henry Norman's treatment of his subject is so concise that no conception of the facts stated in his report can be gained except by reference to the pamphlet itself. The principles on which the French authorities have proceeded are, however, very simple, and all but one of them will be accepted by other countries. The first is that the re-education of a crippled man is a duty which the nation owes to him and to itself. The French have recognised that though the debt of the nation to each wounded soldier is immeasurable, and though he must always have his full pension, yet it is better, both for him and for his fellow-citizens, that he should work for his living rather than be maintained for the rest of his life in idleness. The second principle is that the soldier should be offered his training as soon as possible before he gives way to the universal desire for ease, which follows the hard life of the trenches, and is encouraged by injudicious friends. The third and most disputable is that the State has no right to compel a wounded soldier to devote any of his spare time to exercises, or to exercise any control over him after his discharge. The fourth is that in choosing a calling for a wounded man the authorities should, where possible, endeavour to return him to the occupation which he left on the outbreak of war. Where this is impossible, should discover the occupation in which his early training would be of most value to him. The French have naturally been influenced, as English people would be, by the concentration of industries in different districts. If a man can be sent back to his pre-war occupation, he will live among old friends, if not, he may have to form new associations just when he needs the old ones most.

In almost every other respect the lessons which Sir Henry Norman finds and the facts which he states are as interesting to Australians as to Frenchmen or Englishmen. Without encouraging any ill-founded hopes he sets out the results of the training given to crippled soldiers in sedentary occupations, in carpentering, and in agriculture, and shows how hundreds of them have been fitted to lead lives of happiness and self-respect to themselves and of permanent value to the State. It is appropriate that to be confident of the value of highly developed artificial limbs. In some schools, it is thought, that they are too heavy for general use. But one school has applied them with astonishing, and apparently consistent, success. Professor Amar, who before the war had been engaged in increasing the output of labour by the scientific method called in America after Mr. Taylor, has during the war diverted his energies to the treatment of wounded limbs before fitting them with artificial appliances, and afterwards as to the education of the men who use them. His success has stirred the envy of teachers in all the Allied countries, and has provoked surreptitious inquiries from Germany. In his hands the one-armed man is no worse off than the man who has lost a leg, which is not usually the case, and both can fill a useful place in the field or the factory.

SCHOOL CHILDREN'S HEALTH.

MEDICAL OFFICER'S REPORT.

In the course of his annual report, Dr. C. S. Willis, principal medical officer of the Education Department, points out to the Minister that the work of medical inspection of the schools cannot be estimated by merely considering the number of children examined. With this must be taken into account the vast distances to be travelled to get to these children. In several cases a distance of over a hundred miles has to be covered in travelling from one school to another, and this without the aid of a railway. Experience has shown that with the present staff medical inspection can be conducted at each school about once every three years."

The school medical service was reorganised in 1913, and the first round of medical inspections for the whole State was completed at the middle of 1916. Of 247,255 children examined, 147,079 were suffering from physical defects needing treatment. Of these only 57,310 obtained treatment. In round numbers, 60 out of every 100 children examined were suffering from physical defects, and of every 100 children needing treatment only 39 obtained it. During 1916, 76,3.5 children were medically examined at 753 schools, the staff of the travelling hospital examining 601 of the total of 753 schools. A comparative table shows that during the last two years there has been a progressive fall in the percentage number of children suffering from physical defects sufficiently serious to need treatment. This is only to be expected, as the effect of school medical work makes itself felt.

"There is great need for complete, organised treatment schemes," says Dr. Willis. "Thus, while 3987 children were found to require treatment for eye defects, 2466, or over 60 per cent., failed to obtain treatment; of 2181 children needing treatment for ear defects 1566, or 71 per cent., failed to obtain treatment, of the 6069 children needing treatment for nose and throat defects, 4360, or 71 per cent., failed to obtain treatment, of 36,331 needing treatment for dental defects 14,843, or 41 per cent., failed to obtain treatment. The school medical work of the State," he says, "will not be anything like satisfactory until the schemes already approved, or their equivalent, are fully established. It might be argued that as economy has become a pressing necessity, the State cannot afford to find the money required for full treatment schemes. In reply, I submit that in the interests of economy the State cannot afford to neglect to find the money for the purpose, especially at a time like the present, when the war is taking such a toll of our best. There are some economies that are the worst forms of extravagance."

LABOUR CONFERENCE.

MELBOURNE, Monday.

The annual State conference of the Political Labour Council of Victoria was concluded to-day. Three sessions were held. A long proposal was agreed to providing in effect that a referendum of the Commonwealth electors be taken on the question of abolishing State Parliaments. It was further suggested that, in order to provide for good local government of the people, the Commonwealth Parliament be divided into 20 provinces. A letter was read from the Political Labour League of New South Wales, in which a request was made that the conference adopt a uniform title for the State political organisations. The proposal was that the title should be the "Australian Labour Party," with the addition of the name of the respective State. The suggestion was agreed to, and each State will be asked to endorse the decision.

Believing that if Australia were involved in a scheme of imperial federation their rights and privileges under responsible government would be arrogated, the Grocers' Union proposed that the conference should record its strongest opposition to such a unity, as it might result in Australia being governed "by the plutocrats of England." This proposal provoked a long discussion, and eventually it was agreed to reaffirm the following resolution of the Interstate Conference which met in Melbourne in December last:—"That any proposals for Imperial federation involving the slightest surrender of Australia's self-governing powers in return for a voice in the Empire's foreign policy would be disastrous to Australian ideals, and should not therefore be entertained."

FEDERAL LABOUR PARTY.

MELBOURNE, Monday.

The Federal Parliamentary Labour party met to-day and appointed the following executive committee:—The Leader of the party (Mr. Tudor), Deputy-leader (Senator Gardiner), the Secretary (Mr. Catts), Senators M'Dougall, Needham, and O'Keefe, and Messrs. M'Donald and Higgs.

STATE PARLIAMENT.

GOVERNOR'S SPEECH.

It is expected that the Governor's Speech at the opening of the State Parliament on Tuesday next will contain a reference to the satisfactory progress of the war, and the problems with which the Government is faced in connection with the repatriation of soldiers. In this connection an amendment of the Crown Lands Act will be foreshadowed. A prominent measure of the new session will be that which reviews the industrial laws and amends the Industrial Arbitration Act. An amendment of the Crimes Act will be foreshadowed, which will reduce the number of offences made punishable by death, and will at the same time make more easy the detection of thieving from the wharfs and the receiving of property so stolen. A bill to regulate the manufacture of footwear will provide that where inferior materials are used they shall be branded as such. Then, of course, there is the amendment of the Local Government Act.

Other measures will be introduced during the session, but it is understood that finality has not been reached in regard to these, and they will not be mentioned in his Excellency's Speech.

PRIVATE JACKSON, V.C.

FAILS AS A SPEAKER.

Private W. Jackson, V.C., is a man of deeds, not words. As a soldier he has won his spurs; as a speaker he is a failure. The announcement that he was to be one of the speakers at Martin-place yesterday drew, magnet-like, an immense crowd of people, who cheered to the echo as the tall, youthful hero of Gunbar, wearing his coveted decoration, appeared on the platform. He was introduced by Lieut. Rickwood, but when called upon to speak, and to tell the audience something of the stirring moments through which he had passed, as an inspiring example to others, he stood motionless, just as though the crowd had cast an hypnotic influence over him.

By way of encouraging him to talk, Mrs. Cook, wife of the Minister for the Navy, asked the crowd to accord him three cheers. This they did. Others also tried to persuade Private Jackson to speak, and finally in halting words, and in practically a whisper, the big, shy youth spoke, but only for a few seconds. He simply related his movements as far as France, and asked if there was one man in the crowd who would take his place in the firing line. He was then lost for words, and the other speakers had to point to him, and to his chivalrous deeds, as a recruiting medium. But even this fired the imagination of only a few young men.

"Private Jackson says that he will, if necessary, go back and throw bombs with his one arm," said one of the speakers, and a returned man quickly hopped on to the platform. About eight men responded to the appeal, making about a dozen in all who have been persuaded to enlist largely through Private Jackson's presence the last few days.

It was pointed out that Private Jackson was leaving that night for his home at Gunbar, and his assistance was asked if it would give him a message to take back to his people. "Sydney is proud of you," suggested someone. "Australia is proud of you," was the broader message proposed by

VIOLENT BATTLES.

ADVANCE AT STANISLAU.

LONDON, July 9.

The fighting continues violently in Galicia. The Russians appear, from the German communiques, to have won a victory near Stanislau, in Southern Galicia.

SUNDAY, ISSUED 5.10 P.M.:

Russian:—In the direction of Kovel, in the region of Volapolska, the enemy released gas. Enemy counter-attacks at Godov and in a wood westward of Koniuchy failed.

Dense attacks supported by armoured cars west of Vychka were repulsed.

Intense artillery fire continues east and south east of Brzezany.

SUNDAY, ISSUED 7.20 P.M.:—

German: Russian attacks at Zborov and Stanislau, and in the Upper Bystritza Valley failed.

MONDAY, ISSUED 2.10 A.M.:—

German: The Russians, again attacking near Stanislau, gained ground.

SATURDAY, ISSUED AT MIDNIGHT.

Austrian: We broke down massed attacks lasting all the morning and afternoon south-west of Zborov. The Russians employed 19 divisions, in 15 waves, on a front of ten miles. They were compelled to retreat under our machine guns. Our chasing air squadrons and artillery also broke up the Russian cavalry brought up in readiness for a pursuit. The losses of the Russians were heavy.

RUSSIA PUZZLES GERMANY.

The Amsterdam correspondent of the "Daily Chronicle" says: The strength of the Russian offensive has surprised the German Press. The "Frankfurter Zeitung" states: There is no doubt that the army of the revolutions has accomplished an important achievement in a brief time. The preparation and carrying out of a push of such strength, after all the confusion, are remarkable. It was not a matter merely of the moral of the front-line troops; but a matter of reorganisation, of strengthening communications, and forwarding supplies. It reveals a capacity for being cleverly led, and knowing how to stand the test of discipline and patriotic self-sacrifice. Seldom has an attack in greater strength, and more carefully prepared, been carried out with such bravery on the Eastern front.

The "Berliner Tageblatt" declares that English intrigues and English gold are responsible for the Russian offensive. Nevertheless, it is almost mysterious that the Russian army could be brought so quickly into an attacking condition.

EMBARRASSING FINNS.

The Petrograd correspondent of the "Daily Telegraph" says that the Finns continue to be a grave embarrassment to the Provisional Government. They will not respond to the advances of the Revolutionary Government, and deny the right of the Russian Government to assume the place formerly occupied by the Czar in the Finnish Constitution. They demand that the right to sanction their laws should belong to a Finnish Government, responsible to the Diet. German agents in Finland are circulating false money for the purpose of depressing the trouble. The Russian Government is trying to raise a loan of £16,000,000 for Finland, and the Diet approves of the Finnish Socialists' demand that Russia should pledge the telegraphs, railways, and other property in Finland as security for the loan. The Finns state that they wish to place themselves under international protection, as they dread the instability of the present Russian Government.

MAJOR-GENERAL HOLMES

Mr. Holman has the[se] described the accident on the West[ern] front:—We were passing a battery of [he]avy guns, which were engaging a hostile [ba]ttery. I said: "This is exciting. Let's watch." Major-General Holmes stopped the car and we got out and watched the encounter for some minutes, until a shell fell in a neighbouring paddock. General Holmes said "They have spotted you, Holman." Another shell fell in the same locality. General Holmes said "This is unhealthy. Let us move," and we proceeded for a quarter of a mile. We were again watching the duel when a third shell fell, killing General Holmes. This was probably a loose shell, aimed at the anti-aircraft guns, or a random shot intended to search for British positions.

Other accounts of the death of Major-General Holmes on the West front state that the party motored up to the vicinity of Ploegsteert Wood, intending to go along the flank of the wood. Major-General Holmes, however, considered this route somewhat a "hot spot," and said "we will go along the base of the wood." A shell fell about 50 yards away. A second one fell some distance from it. The fatal shell fell after the party had left the car. It seemed as if the Germans were searching for an aircraft battery or ammunition dumps, as the shells fell as if the gun were sweeping in an arc. The party left the car leaving the chauffeur in charge, and were standing fairly close together when a shell fell about ten to fifteen yards away, and exploded with a terrific report.

All the party were knocked flat on the ground. When Mr. Holman recovered himself, in a dense cloud of dust, he said to Mr. Edwards, his secretary, "The General is badly hit." Both went to Major-General Holmes who was found in a kneeling position, resting on his hands and knees, staring ahead, apparently unable to move or speak. They lifted him up, and carried him to the car. He had a gaping wound in the back, which was bleeding freely. A subsequent examination showed that a piece of shell had pierced the lower back, near the spine. It passed upwards and outwards through the chest. Death must have been instantaneous. Mr. Holman was not hit, nor any other members of the party. The chauffeur was thrown forward on the bonnet of the car, but was not injured. The shell fell on solid rock, and made a hole several inches deep. The hood of the car was wrecked. Major-General Holmes was placed in the car and conveyed to a dressing station.

Major-General Holmes's death caused profound regret in the division. His son and son-in-law attended the funeral, also nearly all the general officers, and representatives of nearly all the units of the division. It was an impressive ceremony, the Australians in his immediate command providing the firing party. Mr. Holman, who is none the worse for his experiences, pays a tribute to Major-General Holmes's fearlessness. He says that New South Wales has lost an officer of undoubted talent.

SWEDISH COLONEL MURDERED.

A Copenhagen message states:—Colonel Smitt, a high officer on the Swedish General Staff, was murdered under sensational circumstances by an unknown visitor to his flat at 2 o'clock on Saturday morning. It is understood that Smitt frequently kept important plans in his flat.

GERMAN WARSHIP MINED.

A new German torpedo boat was mined and destroyed. There were only two survivors.

POLITICAL CRISIS IN GERMANY.

WAR AIMS PROBLEM

CHANCELLOR'S DECLARATION

LONDON, July 9.

It is reported from Berne that an acute crisis has been reached in Germany. The Reichstag Committee held a secret session and heatedly debated the country's war aims all day on Saturday. The anti-annexationists and pan-Germans demanded the Government's adherence to their rival policies.

Subsequently the German Emperor received in audience Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg (Imperial Chancellor), Marshal von Hindenburg (Commander-in-Chief), Grand Admiral von Capelle (Minister for the Navy), General von Stein (Minister for War in Prussia), and Dr. Helfferich (Imperial Minister for the Interior).

Advices received from Amsterdam state that Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg has declared that he rejected the idea of tying himself to a formula of a peace without annexations and without indemnities.

Further advices from Berne state that the political crisis in Germany is primarily attributed to alarm caused in Berlin by the Russian offensive. Suppressed excitement in the lobbies of the Reichstag for several days came to a head on Saturday, when a secret session began at 9 o'clock in the morning.

Herr Erzberger, a member of the Centre party, declared that the military situation was causing geneal uneasiness throughout the country. All classes were demanding that the Government should tell the truth regarding military and submarine prospects.

General von Stein (Prussian Minister for War) and Admiral von Capelle (Minister for Marine) replied optimistically, the latter declaring that submarines would paralyse Britain.

Herr Scheidemann (leader of the main German Socialist party) demanded that the Government should make a clear declaration that it would accept peace without annexations.

Herr Westarp (leader of the Conservative party) demanded, on the other hand, that the Government should insist on annexations.

The Chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, replied, and the committee adjourned until Monday.

The parties later privately discussed the situation until late at night. Some of the parties resumed on Sunday.

The Emperor had a prolonged audience with Ministers.

The Berlin newspapers reflect the gravity of the situation.

The "Berliner Tageblatt" (Radical) learns that all the parties, from the Socialists to the National Liberals, are convinced that the Government must declare in favour of either the anti-annexationists or the pan-Germans. There is a general conviction that a coalition Ministry, representing all the parties, is the only possible solution. It is doubtful whether Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg will continue in office, and Admiral von Capelle (Minister for the Navy) is almost certain to resign.

The "Vossische Zeitung" (an old-established Conservative journal) anticipates extremely important developments, and voices a general demand that the Government shall state its home and war policies. The "Deutsche Tages Zeitung" (pan-German) says that a coalition Ministry is being discussed behind the scenes in order to save Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg. It is a hopeful sign that Marshal von Hindenburg and General von Ludendorff have arrived.

Other Berlin and provincial newspapers are discussing possible successors to Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, Count von Roedern (Imperial Treasurer) and others.

The "Strassburger Post" (according to a Berne message) states: No one can possibly fail to see many signs of nervousness in Germany, even among those in powerful positions. The nervousness is partly due to the military position, which does not yet permit us to calculate with mathematical precision the issue of the war. The article concludes: It is certain that the U-boats will bring us victory.

The "Petit Parisienne" says the German Empress accompanied the German Emperor to the conference held in Vienna. They carefully avoided showing themselves to the people in Vienna.

A message from Copenhagen says the "Berlin Tageblatt" asserts that the Chancellor, addressing a secret sitting of the Main Committee of the Reichstag, declared that he was opposed to a peace without annexations or indemnities.

The German minority Socialists, who are on their way home from Stockholm, do not believe that England's pressure secured a renewal of the Russian offensive. They believe that revolutionary Russia wants to show its power. They declare that a separate peace is impossible.

ITALIAN FRONT.

An Italian official message on Sunday stated:—We drove off an enemy attempt to capture advanced posts in the Upper Vallelina (in the Trentino).

On raiding squadrons dropped two and a half tons of explosives on military and mercury-extracting depots in Idria (a mining town 20 miles east by north of Gorz), causing damage and fires.

CHANGES IN GREECE

Advices from Athens state that eight generals, 69 colonels, and 56 lieutenant-colonels have been placed on the retired list by the new Greek Government.

King Alexander, addressing a large deputation of officers of the National Defence organisation (which is pro-Venizelos), acknowledged their patriotism and appealed to them to co-operate with their brothers-in-arms in the maintenance of discipline.

THE SUBMARINES.

The chairman of the United States Shipping Board, Mr. Denman, in a statement, says that the Shipping Board will probably make a request for an additional £100,000,000 in order to enlarge the building programme. This amount, with the vessels now building, would make available in the next 18 months sufficient tonnage to greatly reduce the effectiveness of the submarine campaign. "The present appropriation of £100,000,000 is replacing not more than four-fifths of the shipping destroyed."

It is reported from Stockholm that uneasiness is manifested regarding the fate of 50 fishing boats which have not returned from the North Sea. Five are officially reported to have been sunk by a German submarine, the captain of which declares that he sank about twenty.

The Superintendent of Fisheries states that fishing has been carried on outside the German blockade zone, and therefore the sinking is unjustifiable.

WESTERN FRONT

AERIAL FIGHTING.

LONDON, July 9.

The British communiques report aerial activity, and the French further violent but unsuccessful enemy attacks.

BRITISH.

SUNDAY, ISSUED 12.45 A.M.

We drove off an attempted raid eastward of Loos.

Aerial fighting yesterday was chiefly between Lens and Ypres. In this area a large number of the enemy's machines were encountered. Despite the enemy's pronounced activity we bombed and damaged aerodromes. We carried out successful artillery work and photography. The enemy dropped 144 bombs on our side of the line. Our machines dropped three times that number on the enemy's side. Eight hostile machines were brought down, and six were driven down. Five of ours are missing.

SUNDAY, ISSUED 2.15 P.M.:—

We carried out successful raids south-east of Hargicourt and north of Ypres.

SUNDAY, ISSUED MIDNIGHT:—

There is continued enemy aerial activity. Our pilots yesterday frequently broke up large formations. They carried out successful raids, and bombed and attacked with machine guns enemy aeroplane depots and troops. We brought down six German machines, and ten were driven down. Eight of ours are missing.

FRENCH.

SUNDAY, ISSUED AT 5.15 P.M.:

An all-night intense German bombardment from north of Laffaux Mill to Froidmont Farm (on the Aisne front) preceded violent attacks on four different sectors of this front. After desperate fighting the enemy masses were driven off with very heavy losses.

North and east of Laffaux Mill, and east of Pantheon, our positions were entirely maintained. Between Les Bovettes and Froidmont Farm an attack developed on a front of two miles. After several hours' struggle the enemy was ejected from the first line elements which he had penetrated.

We have appreciably extended our position, which we retook on July 1 east of Cerny.

We brilliantly carried three strong salients on the left bank of the Meuse, namely, west of Mort Homme and two south-west of Hill 304. Enemy counter-attacks were repulsed.

MONDAY, ISSUED 1.10 A.M.:—

The artillery struggle is most keen in the Pantheon and Froidmont Farm districts. We occupied a trench element.

There are artillery actions at various points, especiany towards the Hurtebise (Aisne) and High Mount (Champagne) sectors.

GERMAN REPORTS.

(Admiralty—per Wireless Press.)

SUNDAY, ISSUED 7.20 P.M.:—

Artillery duels have occurred on the coast in the Ypres and Wytschaete sectors, at Lens, and between the Somme and the Oise.

French attacks west of Cerny, south of La Borelle Farm, south-west of Allies, at Mount Cornillet, Hill 304, and on the western slope of Mort Homme, failed.

Enemy airmen dropped 100 incendiary bombs in the Westphalian industrial regions, Trier, Mannheim, Ludwigshafen, and Rodniben. No military damage resulted.

The enemy yesterday lost nine aeroplanes on the front.

MONDAY, ISSUED 2.10 A.M.:—

We gained considerable ground and 700 prisoners on the Chemin des Dames sector, south-eastward of Pargny and Filain.

AMERICAN FOOD EMBARGO.

TO CONTROL EXPORT.

PRESSURE ON GERMANY

NEW YORK, July 8.

The President has issued a proclamation bringing into force a drastic embargo on the export of food, which will become effective on July 15. It is designed to conserve the foodstuffs of the United States, and prevent food and other supplies reaching Germany through neutral countries.

The proclamation prohibits exportation to any part of the world, including allied countries, except under a license issued by the Department of Commerce.

The articles affected include coal, petrol, and other oils, fuels, wheat and other grains, flour, meals, fodder and other feeds, meats, fats, steel, iron, fertiliser, and arms and ammunition.

The law provides a drastic penalty for violations of this regulation, including the forfeiture of vessels carrying forbidden exports without a license.

President Wilson, in a public statement, says:—The safeguarding of the United States food supply is the first aim of the embargo. The next consideration is the needs of the United States and the Allies. The Government intends to supply neutrals with the more pressing necessities when assured that the neutrals are husbanding their own resources and are not supplying Germany, directly or indirectly.

The Washington correspondent of the "New York Times" has reported authoritatively that a complete embargo on the export of wheat is probable immediately, which will remain effective until the United States and the Allies complete the organisation of a co-operative purchasing board, which will probably be headed by the Food Controller, Mr. Hoover. The wheat will then be apportioned. It is expected that this step will end the competitive wheat purchasing, and will stabilise the market.

Meanwhile the United States is endeavouring to have the Allies move the huge surplus of wheat from Canada. Later, the embargo will probably be extended to other grains and commodities. "The scope of the proclamation," says the correspondent, "surprised even those who urged immediate drastic action. The President is determined to stop the leakage of food to Germany. The embargo is the first step in the rationing of the neutral nations contiguous to Germany."

CHINA'S UPHEAVAL.

MONARCHISTS WEAKENING.

It is reported from Peking that the Republican armies continue their march upon the capital, where Chang Shun's army recently replaced the Emperor on the throne.

The Foreign Ministers are attempting mediation, as the supporters of the youthful Emperor are weakening, and have expressed a desire for an armistice.

AIR RAID ON ESSEN

KRUPP'S BOMBED.

LONDON, July 9.

An Amsterdam message says that 31 aeroplanes participated in an air raid on Essen. Several bombs were dropped with terrible effect on the gun factories at Thyssen. A number of buildings were wholly destroyed. The authorities have already admitted that 20 were killed; but the number really was much greater. There were large numbers of wounded.

Enormous military damage was done at Krupp's factories, which were the chief objective of the aeroplanes. Essen was divided between two squadrons, in order to distribute the destruction.

One aeroplane, when returning, was forced to land in Holland.

BRITISH RAID.

The British Admiralty announces:—Our naval aeroplanes carried out a raid on Saturday evening on Ghistelles aerodrome, in Western Flanders. In spite of hostile formations and heavy attacks, they successfully bombed their objectives. All returned.

ATTACK ON LONDON.

DARING RAIDERS.

Some experts express the opinion that the machines with which the Germans raided London on Saturday morning were twin-engine Gotha biplanes, with comparatively slow speed—about 70 miles an hour. They came swiftly before a brisk east wind, and were correspondingly slow returning. Hence the raid was all the more daring. The raiders flew at a height of about 6000 feet, which is much lower than previous similar raids—another evidence of their coolness and daring.

The raid has aroused the activity of members of Parliament who favour reprisals. It is understood the Press and the Government will reconsider their attitude. The Premier, Mr. Lloyd George, summoned experts to meet him after the raid.

Londoners unanimously pay tribute to the amazing daring of the raiders. They carried out their audacious plans with the utmost coolness. It is believed the entire squadron was of the latest "Albatross" type, each carrying three men and all capable of wonderful speed and ability in fighting manoeuvres. The machine guns were able to shoot in any direction.

It was noticeable that citizens did not take the risks they formerly took. They dodged in and out of the shelters. Whereas the streets immediately threatened by the oncoming forces were almost deserted, those thoroughfares which the raiders had passed became instantaneously thronged with crowds in search of souvenir shells.

It is generally believed that there was more damage, but fewer casualties than in the last daylight raid.

A guard on a train going to London describes a duel. One of the raiders left the formation and aimed bombs at the train. They missed. He swooped lower over the engine. Suddenly a British aeroplane tackled him. The fight was at such a low altitude that the passengers distinctly heard the rattle of machine guns. Both machines climbed up, the German fleeing seaward, hotly pursued.

GERMAN REPORT.

A German communique says: One of our squadrons yesterday freely bombed London docks, the harbour works, and warehouses. Fires and explosions were observed. One English aeroplane was shot down over London. We also bombed Margate. Our aeroplanes returned, except one, which compulsorily descended into the sea.

SPIRIT OF FRANCE.

FAULTS IN LAST OFFENSIVE.

It is reported from Paris that M. Painleve (Minister for War), in the course of a statement, said:—"It is certain that cruel trials await France, but she will surmount them. We have hitherto paid dearly for results, and have suffered heavy losses, but losses that could have been avoided must be avoided in future.

"An inquiry," he continued, "will shortly be opened, the result of which will enable the Government to make definite decisions. Our Allies know that nothing will shake France's will. She will not fail. However rough the road may be we shall continue to the end."

Intense interest centred in the debate in the French Chamber of Deputies on the last military offensive (on April 18).

M. Augagneur, an ex-Minister, urged that penalties should be imposed on military leaders causing useless loss of life.

M. Meunier criticised the inequalities of the justice meted out to officers as compared with the men.

M. Painleve admitted that faults had been committed in the last offensive, and recognised that penalties should be exacted. An inquiry would be made dealing with the general situation. He said that economic measures would be taken in agreement with the Allies. France knew how to reconcile military duty with economic needs. The Allies would only cease fighting when the interests of democracy were assured.

RIOTS IN COLOGNE.

QUEENSLAND PARLIAMENT.

BRISBANE, Monday.

The third and final session of the Queensland Parliament was opened at noon to-day by the Governor. The policy of the Government was read, showing that its aim is to make the best possible provision for the heroes who had risked all in the cause of empire. With respect to settling soldiers on the land, three large areas had so far been set aside for the purpose, comprising over 200,000 acres. "A popular initiative and referendum bill is to be reintroduced," the speech proceeds, "and in view of the result of the Legislative Council referendum the Government will take such steps as will prevent the Council from rejecting or materially altering measures which the selected representatives of the people had approved."

MINERS' COTTAGES.

BULLI, Monday.

The proposal of the Bulli Colliery and Coke-works, Ltd., to erect about 100 cottages specially for men employed at the works will materially relieve the present scarcity of dwelling-houses in the locality. This company has at present surveying land near the colliery in order to commence operations at an early date. The dwellings will be sold only to the company's workmen on an extended payment system; and if an owner wishes to dispose of his house he can do so to another miner, or can arrange to sell back to the company. It is stated that applications for about 50 cottages have already been lodged. The object of the proposal is mainly to secure sufficient labour at hand to assist in the development of the colliery.

DISLOYAL IRISH.

LONDON, July 9.

The polling in the East Clare by-election, rendered necessary by the death in action of Captain Redmond, M.P., will take place on Tuesday. A fierce electoral struggle is proceeding between Nationalists and the Sinn Fein. Mr. Devalera and the Sinn Feiners are openly advocating an Irish Republic on the basis that, if Ulster will not acquiesce, Ulster must go under. They also advocate the destruction of the Nationalist party. They express a wish that Germany may be successful.

A Stockholm message says that Chesterton Hall and Gaffney, Irish delegates, have reached Stockholm from Berlin. They are now fiercely attacking the socialist committee there, on the ground that it is supporting English imperialistic interests.

MILITARY MEDALS.

It is announced that 213 Australians have been gazetted for Military Medals.

NEW GREEK REGIME.

An Athens message says that a search of M. Merkouris's house revealed swords and important military material. The search continues.

RECRUITING.

INTERSTATE CONFERENCE.

Professor Macintyre, chairman of the New South Wales Recruiting Committee, accompanied by Major E. J. Shillington, organising secretary, and Lieutenant M'Culloch, left for Melbourne yesterday to attend the interstate conference in connection with the new effort to raise 7000 men per month in the Commonwealth. Colonel Thynne, Captain Dash, and Mr. Ramsay, representing the Queensland State Recruiting Committee, left Sydney for Melbourne by the same train. The New South Wales delegates will return on Thursday.

TAKING HIS MATE'S PLACE.

In connection with the recruiting tent in Prince Alfred Park, the officer in charge reports that 14 men volunteered on Friday night, and 10 more during the meeting on Sunday afternoon. One of the volunteers—Sydney John Williams, of 44 Wells-street, Redfern—informed the recruiting officer that he was enlisting to take the place of a mate who had been killed at the front. Williams and his friend were fellow-workmen, and when the latter went away on active service Williams offered to take his place if he was "knocked out."

MEETINGS.

Botany.—Bunch Taylor's, 12.15 p.m.: Sergt.-major Donald, Sapper J. Lucas, Recruiting-officer Bickford.

Roseville:—8 p.m.: Lantern lecture on Gallipoli, Sergt. Saunders.

To-morrow, at 1 o'clock, Miss Grace Scobie, Q.M.S. Currie (late Seaforth Highlanders), and Warrant-officer M'Murtrie will speak in Martin-place.

INSURANCE OF MARRIED MEN.

An offer to insure the lives of the first 25 men who enlisted in Martin-place on the occasion of the great recruiting rally on Empire Day was made by Farmer and Company, Ltd. Twenty were accepted and passed as medically fit by the military authorities, and Farmer and Company instructed the A.M.P. Society to prepare the necessary policies. These have since been handed to the men without any conditions being imposed, the firm agreeing to pay the premiums on the amount assured, viz., £250, for the duration of the war. On the safe return of the men who participated in this offer they can either continue to pay the premiums themselves or take the surrender value of the policy in cash.

"THE N.R.A. 150."

Meetings have been held during the past week in connection with the formation of the above unit at Inverell, Tingha, Bingara, Moree, and North Sydney. Good results were obtained at North Sydney and Tingha. The unit is, however, still incomplete, and rifle club officials are urged to do everything in their power to complete the movement at an early date.

SPORTSMEN'S UNIT.

The organisers of the second sportsmen's unit, Sergts. W. Saunderson and Darlow, received notification yesterday that they had been gazetted as lieutenants. Both officers have passed through Duntroon College. They report that the enlistments to date have been a record for a special unit; 162 men have enlisted as a result of a campaign lasting about a fortnight. More men are being enrolled, so that vacancies in the unit may be filled as they occur. The barometer shows the enlistments from the various branches of sport now stand as follows:—General athletes, 28; boxers, 19; bowlers, 6; basketballers, 8; cricketers, 16; footballers, 46; golfers, 3; surfers and swimmers, 20; sailing and rowing clubs, 6; tennis players, 8. Total, 162.

ELIGIBLES IN DEFENCE DEPARTMENT.

MELBOURNE, Monday.

In pursuance of the policy enunciated by the Prime Minister (Mr. Hughes), that no fit single man would be employed by the Government in any position which could be filled with equal advantage by a returned soldier or an ineligible, a census of the employees in the Defence Department is now being taken by the authorities.

Mr. Geoffrey Wood, a member of the reading staff of the "Sydney Morning Herald," who recently returned from the front, after having lost his right arm, was given an enthusiastic reception by his colleagues of the reading and compositing staffs last night.

GERMAN BRUTALITY.

A remark by Pte. F. Fernie, D.C.M., in the course of a speech in Martin-place yesterday, is interesting, because of doubts expressed in some quarters about the reported brutal treatment of Belgian children by Germans in the earlier stages of the war. Pte Fernie said he had seen a Belgian child of tender years with her hands cut off, while, as a further illustration of the treatment to which she had been subjected, the child had held up her dress and indicated where "one of the Huns" had given her a stab in the thigh with a bayonet.

LABOUR MEETING AT BROKEN HILL.

BROKEN HILL, Monday.

The order of the Chief Secretary prohibiting public meetings in the Trades Hall on Sunday, and conveyed through the Trades Hall trustees to the Labour Volunteer Army, was defied last night, not by the volunteer army but by unionists generally. The Labour Volunteer Army held a demonstration of protest in the Central Reserve in the afternoon, at which the chief speaker was Miss Hotson. In the evening the Trades Hall was crowded. Mr. George Ken (president of the A.M.A.) occupied the chair. He and Messrs. Geo. Dale, J. J. O'Reilly, and E. A. Sinclair (secretary of the L.V.A.) spoke against the alleged attempted interference with free speech. An overflow meeting was held outside the hall, at which speeches to the same effect were made. The speakers at both meetings advocated vigorous action to preserve the rights and liberties which it asserted the Government was now seeking to deprive them of.

WAR NOTES.

FRANCE'S LOSSES.

When M. Painleve, the French Minister for War, referred to the cruel trials that await France, he was evidently thinking of the enemy's fixed determination to use his available striking power on the West against the French while contenting himself with the adoption of a strong defensive attitude along the section of that front where he is faced by the British. His belief that he has bled France white and that sooner or later her strength must fail her is no freshly-acquired conviction of the enemy's. When he failed to achieve the spectacular success which would permit his troops to march triumphantly into the old ruined fortress town of Verdun, he explained that one of his main reasons for the Verdun offensive was to continue the process of bleeding France white, which process had been going on since the commencement of the war. This enemy aim was defeated at that time by the strategy which the defenders of Verdun adopted, and which provided for the sacrifice of positions only after the enemy had been forced to pay the maximum price for their possession. But although France has given close attention to the problem of minimising her casualties during both offensive and defensive action, the losses which she has suffered during almost three years of war, when her armies bore the brunt of Germany's maximum military effort, have undoubtedly been severe. Exactly what they have been even Germany, in all probability, has no accurate idea, as France has most jealously guarded this important military secret from the outset.

COST OF RECENT OFFENSIVE.

This question of losses appears to have been the main topic of the discussion in the French Chamber of Deputies, when M. Painleve admitted that faults had been committed in the last offensive. The fact that the French gained considerable ground, and established themselves in commanding positions on the heights northward of the Aisne and in the sector in the Champagne eastward of Reims, suggests that the fault does not lie in the smallness of the gains achieved so much as in the big price paid for success. But, while the French offensive of April last may have been attended by heavy losses, it does not necessarily follow that the price which the enemy exacted was out of all proportion to the value of the French gains. The real value of the French offensive could best be tested by a knowledge of the proportionate loss which both sides sustained as a result of the French move. In this respect we must not forget that the enemy was forced, at the time of the French attacks, to counter-attack heavily in order to cover the new lines on which he had to fall back. This necessity, which the British offensive also helped to create, no doubt compelled him to draw largely upon that specially formed strategic reserve which he had accumulated by anticipating his future income. He is still delivering counter blows against the positions which the French captured in that offensive, and, if we are to believe the French communiques, he is suffering very heavy losses and achieving comparatively slight gains. Severe, therefore, as the French losses may have been in capturing these positions, it would be difficult to say which side has paid the greater price in the fighting which has gone on there.

THE LATEST GERMAN ATTACK.

The latest effort on the part of the enemy to drive the French from the positions gained during the last offensive was made on Sunday last. The initial bombardment was carried out along a front of probably seven miles, which included the western portion of the sector on which the enemy attacked on Tuesday last. Infantry attacks were delivered at four places. Those on the French left appear to have met with practically no success, but on the right the enemy penetrated the first line at places along a front of less than two miles. He was unable to maintain his gains, however, and, although some severe fighting was engaged in, the French still held all their positions at the conclusion of the struggle, thus repeating their performance of Tuesday last. While the German communique suggests that the French counter-attacks on the western side of the Meuse were unsuccessful, the French themselves claim to have captured three strong salients on that sector. This would not represent any considerable gain of ground, but it has robbed the enemy of positions for which he has been struggling very hard lately. The pressure which he recently brought to bear on the western side of Mort Homme and westward of the adjacent Hill 304 was, undoubtedly, exerted with a definite object, and it is satisfactory to see that the French are fully alive to the situation.

RUSSIA STILL ATTACKING.

The news from Russia this morning, although brief, shows that the struggle in Eastern Galicia continues with sufficient violence to convince the enemy that the Russian is still an active belligerent whom he cannot afford to take lightly. No verification of yesterday's unofficial report regarding fighting around Pinsk in the Pripet Marshes has been received, and we may well leave this story out of our minds while considering the situation on the Eastern front. The Austrian communique issued at midnight on Saturday last, which appeared in a late edition yesterday, suggests that a rather ambitious Russian attack south-west of Zborov, on the Tarnopol-Lemberg railway, broke down under the Austrian machine gun fire. The launching of 15 waves of infantry in this attack is reminiscent of the methods adopted during General Brussiloff's advance on Lutsk last year. The statement in the same message that chasing air squadrons broke up the Russian cavalry reminds us that Russia suffered severely during last year's offensive from the operations of enemy airmen, who apparently encountered very little opposition. Mr. Stanley Washburn, the correspondent of the "Times" on this front, has frequently drawn attention to the regularity with which enemy airmen bombed depots behind the Russian lines, and to the ease with which they flew at low altitudes over the Russian communications, sweeping the roads with machine gun fire and paying special attention to the slow-moving carts conveying the wounded.

GROUND GAINED NEAR STANISLAU.

The latest German communique states that the Russians are re-attacking in the region of Stanislau, and makes the rather vague admission that they gained ground. The fact is interesting, although the lack of particulars regarding the extent of the Russian gain leaves us in doubt as to its actual value. Any important success achieved in this region, however, would have a big effect upon the general situation in Galicia. It is here that the Russians made their southern drive along the Dniester last year, when they were brought to a stop near Halicz. Stanislau is some 14 miles or more south of Halicz, but the Russians have hitherto been exerting pressure on the front northward of Stanislau and towards Halicz. Yesterday they claimed to have pushed the enemy back on the Jamnica-Pasieczna front, which extends across the railway junction immediately above Stanislau, where the Stanislau-Lemberg railway leads up to the north past Halicz, and another line branches away to the westward. It is possible that this later Russian gain referred to in the German communique was made near this same sector. A Russian advance here would sooner or later threaten the safety of the important railway junction of Halicz, which was defended so stubbornly by the Austrians during the repeated Russian attacks towards the close of General Brussiloff's last offensive.

RECRUITING TENT BURNED DOWN.

Shortly after 10 o'clock last night the recruiting tent in Hyde Park, near Queen's statue, was destroyed by fire. A detachment from fire brigade headquarters turned out, but were unable to save the tent. The cause of the outbreak is unknown.

TUG FOUNDERS.

SIXTEEN MEN MISSING.

MELBOURNE, Monday.

Two days out from Port Pirie (S.A.), on the return voyage to Sydney, with the four-masted auxiliary schooner Astoria in tow, the tug Nyora (396 tons), owned by Huddart Parker, Limited, foundered this morning in a gale. Her officers and crew numbered 16, and all are reported to have been lost. The Astoria, though helpless at the time of the disaster, and herself in a position of danger, fortunately reached port safely.

Messrs. Huddart, Parker, and Co. to-day received the following wireless message from the master of the schooner Astoria:—

"The tug Nyora foundered at 10.30 a.m. to-day after casting off its hawser. We can see nothing of the lifeboat. It looks as if all hands went down with it. We are unable, on account of the heavy gale, to ascertain the facts or render assistance, as we are ourselves in a helpless position. Now in latitude 36.52 and south longitude 138.50 east."

The Nyora's crew of 16 were all Melbourne men. The list is as follows:—W. M. M'Bain, captain; J. Parker, mate; H. E. Davis, A.B.; M. Olsen, A.B.; G. Lansley, A.B.; G. Stubbs, chief engineer; H. M. Scott, second engineer; R. M'Intyre, greaser; P. Lee, fireman; S. Crocker, fireman; J. Simpson, fireman; S. Griffiths, fireman; W. M'Tavish, cook; E. N. Lock, steward; one unknown.

The Nyora was engaged to tow the Astoria (which carried timber for the Broken Hill Co.) from Sydney to Port Pirie and back, a distance of 2450 miles. The Nyora left Melbourne on June 8, arrived at Sydney on June 11, and commenced her task on June 13. Port Pirie was reached on June 26. The tug waited till the Astoria had discharged her cargo, and the return trip to Sydney was commenced at 7 o'clock last Saturday morning.

The Nyora was probably the best known steam tug in the Port of Melbourne. She was a handsome steam tug of 396 tons gross, and was built and engined in 1909 by J. P. Rennoldson and Sons at South Shields for Huddart, Parker, Ltd.

Towage is dangerous work in rough weather. Not only are there the usual difficulties which surround the navigation of a small vessel, but there is added the possibility that an extra strain will be imposed at a critical moment by the weight of the second vessel. For this reason a stipulation is made that wire tow ropes will not be used unless the risk of damage to the tug by so doing is undertaken by the ship. The information to hand is not yet sufficient to make it clear whether Captain M'Bain experienced any difficulty with the tow rope, but obviously it must have severed or cart off in time.

WOMEN FIGHT.

ANTI-CONSCRIPTION DISORDER IN BRISBANE.

BRISBANE, Monday.

There was a most disorderly scene to-night at a meeting of women, held in the School of Arts, to advocate some form of compulsory military service. The attendance was well over 200.

Prior to the commencement of proceedings a woman opposed to the objects of the gathering stated that a meeting held in the Trades Hall that afternoon had decided to break up this meeting. Later about 30 women, accompanied by Miss Thorpe, who has had several unpleasant experiences owing to her pacifist propaganda, took their seats in the body of the hall.

A motion was moved asking for compulsory service. Miss Thorpe desired to move an amendment. While she was speaking interruptions were frequent. Miss Thorpe walked towards the platform, and endeavoured to continue her argument.

The meeting wanted none of her, but Miss Thorpe managed to stop there by desperately hanging on to the table.

Then the hostile party made a dash at some of the conscientious, and a free fight followed. Women smacked each others' faces, pulled each others' hair, and hurled objectionable epithets at each other. In the scrimmage many dresses were torn. There was also much cheering, hooting, and "counting out."

Presently a policeman arrived, and took Miss Thorpe and her dishevelled followers out through a side door, amid yells and counter yells. The organised band of interrupters had met its Waterloo.

When order was restored a motion in favour of conscription was carried.

SERGEANT-MAJOR EDWARDS.

Returning to Sydney badly wounded as one of the Lone Pine heroes, Sergeant-major Edwards, D.C.M., is now comfortably housed in the home which has been generously provided for him by the Balmain Voluntary Workers' Association. The four-roomed cottage in Lyall-street, off Flood-street, Leichhardt, was handed over to the sergeant-major on Sunday afternoon. Alderman H. P. Scott (Mayor of Balmain), as chairman of the testimonial fund, was assisted by Mr. J. Houston (hon. sec.) and Mr. E. J. Power (hon. treasurer), in carrying out the details of the ceremony. The large assemblage included Senator Grant, Mr. W. H. Mahony, M.P., Mr. H. D. M'Intosh, M.L.C., Mr. John Storey, M.L.A., Mr. John Quirk, M.L.A., Mr. Moffat Burns, Mr. James Burns, and nearly all the aldermen of Leichhardt and Balmain. The aged father of the brave soldier was also present.

Miss Ada Reeve was invited by the committee to hand the key of the cottage to the returned soldier. The popular actress-singer was herself presented with a small gold key as a souvenir of the ceremony. After a graceful tribute to Sergeant-major Edwards Miss Reeve said that she would have much pleasure in helping by a donation to clear the debt off the building.

It was announced that the cottage furniture, including a piano, is being supplied by Mrs. Harry Rickards and Mr. H. D. M'Intosh.

THE POSTAL SERVICE.

Mr. J. G. Willison, general secretary of the Post and Telegraph Association, in the course of a reply to a letter from the Postmaster-General, Mr. William Webster, concerning increases to officers of the postal service, says he is quoted by the Minister as having said: "That in New Zealand the salaries of the post and telegraph employees had been increased by £400,000." "What I said," he proceeds, "was that the salaries of Civil servants, including post and telegraph employees, had been increased by £400,000 during the year." The £445 "Kaipo," in the New Zealand Post and Telegraph Association journal. My remarks had reference to the statement of the Minister that 'in none of the countries at war to-day

MACQUARIE ELECTION.

NATIONALISTS' CAMPAIGN.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL REPORTER.)

DUBBO, Monday.

Keen interest is being taken in the by-election for Macquarie. The Attorney-General, Mr. Hall, came along to open the campaign, but upon arriving in Dubbo he found that there was some dissatisfaction over the selection of Mr. Murdoch M'Leod. There are two big towns in the electorate, Dubbo and Wellington. Mr. Blacket was favoured by Dubbo, and Mr. M'Leod by Wellington. The choice of the executive fell upon Mr. M'Leod. A section of the Dubbo Nationalists expressed their disapproval, and the Attorney-General found the local branch split into two camps—the Blacketites and the M'Leodites. It resolved itself into a contest between Wellington and Dubbo. Mr. Hall, who is recognised as one of the best organisers in Parliament—he learnt his business with Mr. Holman—decided that before anything else was done the differences must be settled. At his suggestion a meeting of the Dubbo Nationalists was convened. It lasted over an hour, and was addressed by the Attorney-General, who stated subsequently that, although some of those present felt very keenly the fact that Mr. Blacket had not been selected, the meeting decided to be loyal to the Nationalist cause, and give whole-hearted support to Mr. M'Leod. Several prominent townspeople said afterwards that the result of the negotiations was a triumph for Mr. Hall. The Nationalists will now face the electors as a united party.

The Minister is accompanied by Messrs. Brunstwell, M'Garry, and Bagnall, M.L.A.

Speaking in Dubbo to-night, Mr. Hall said the question which the Macquarie electors would help to solve by their votes on the 28th was whether we were to have Parliamentary government in New South Wales or whether Parliament was itself to be governed by an outside body. To anyone who had the slightest idea as to what popular government meant the alternative to a National Government was deplorable. The rapid degeneration of the official Labour movement in the last three years was without a parallel in history. Official Labour to-day had departed from every principle for which it had stood in years gone by. There were some hopeful souls who viewed with disapproval the acts of the P.L.L. executive during last year, and hoped for better things when conference met; but the conference had outrun its own executive in expelling decent men and protecting others. Let any man, he said, contrast the fate of Mr. Brookfield with that of a man like M'Gowen. The veteran Labour leader, who had given a lifetime's consistent service to build up the movement, had been expelled from that movement in a single hour; but with Mr. Brookfield it was different. Messrs. John Storey and Catts waited upon the executive on March 28, and made out a case for presentations, after which the executive passed resolutions:—(1) Repudiating Mr. Brookfield's statement that "the red flag was the only flag he would spill his blood for, and as for the Union Jack he would never spill a drop for it;" and (2) calling upon him immediately to repudiate the statement, or show cause why he should not be expelled from the movement. Nothing happened further for a fortnight, when a letter was sent to Mr. Brookfield stating that the executive considered his explanation unsatisfactory, and calling upon him to resign from the P.L.L. One might have thought, Mr. Hall continued, that this would have ended the matter, but it did not. The executive, which could drive out Messrs. Holman, M'Gowen, Morrish, Hollis, and men of that type, field against Mr. Brookfield, who was still a Labour member. That was because the Brookfield spirit was triumphant in the Labour movement of to-day. (Applause.) The enemies of the National party would fain make the people believe that the Nationalists would revive the question of conscription. He could not conceive that such a matter remotely entered into present-day politics. Certain persons who desired to injure the National Government were attempting to keep the subject alive, but the promise of the Prime Minister, made no doubt with the assent of the whole of his colleagues, was perfectly clear. Mr. Hughes said in effect previous to the late election that the question of conscription would not be reintroduced unless the British army or navy met with something in the nature of an overwhelming reverse. Such a contingency had not arrived. It was true that for a while Russia ceased to be a fighting factor, but to-day she was doing her part. Since the Federal elections the United States had come in, the German Emperor's friend, Constantine, had been driven off the throne of Greece and M. Venizelos had returned to power. None of these things could be looked upon as bearing the slightest resemblance to a reverse. "The navy still rules the waves, and unless the Prime Minister is prepared to treat his pre-election promise as the German Government treated the scrap of paper guaranteeing the integrity of Belgium, then there is no danger of Mr. Hughes being a party to reintroducing the question.

If the people of Dubbo, he said, knew the men at the Trades Hall who wished to run the country there would be no need for him to make an appeal on behalf of Mr. M'Leod. If they knew those men they would not trust them to run a pea-and-thimble (laughter.) It was commonly thought that all the men who were expelled from the Labour movement were turned out because they were conscriptionists. That was not so. Mr. M'Garry, M.L.A., did not advocate conscription, but he was expelled. Mr. Justice Heydon had given an award which was not considered satisfactory by the Trades Hall people and they demanded his dismissal from the Bench.

A Voice: Did you notice that Mr. Justice Higgins gave an award which was not satisfactory to the pastoralists, and they decided to petition the Prime Minister.

Mr. Hall: If they do, and Mr. Hughes refuses to do as asked, he will not receive a letter from Mr. Archdale Parkhill demanding his resignation. (Laughter and applause.) That, then, is the difference between the National party and the Labour party. (Applause.)

Referring to the recent Labour conference, Mr. Hall said that hardly a word was said in support of the Allies, who were fighting and dying for the cause of liberty. (Applause.) Messrs. Guilfoyle and A. P. O'Hara did endeavour to bring the matter up, but the conference had no time for it. They wanted to devote their evenings to seeing how the I.W.W. men could be got out of gaol. Every Friday night, while those men were out of gaol, there was a fire in Sydney. How since the police arrested the I.W.W. men there had not been a Friday night fire in Sydney. (Applause.) Was that, he asked, merely a coincidence? He did not wish to review those cases, but he ventured the opinion that those men were rightly in a place where they would not be able to set any more buildings alight. (Applause.) In future every Labour union would have the right to nominate one delegate for every 1000 members. To see how that worked it was only necessary to take the Seamen's Union, which had 12,000 or 13,000 members, and would be entitled to 12 or 13 members. They could never get those 12,000 men together, so it simply meant that the 12 or 13 men would elect themselves. (Applause.)

Dealing with the strike of the boys at the Randwick workshops, Mr. Hall said that the Government would resist all the attempts of any body of men to hold it by the throat and get by force conditions which they could not get by reason. (Applause.) The trades union movement of to-day stood for anarchy. (Applause.) The interests of the State, as a whole, were forgotten by the modern Labour movement. There was scope on the New South Wales coast for many trawlers to supply the people with fish, yet a section of unionists tried to kill the State trawling industry. (Applause.) All the legislation that would be brought forward by the present Government would be directed towards winning the war.

At the meeting which was presided over by the Mayor (Ald. Palmer) Mr. Blacket was present, which fact, it was said, did more than anything else to ensure that all differences had been amicably settled. After Mr. M'Leod had spoken Mr. Blackett said he stood before the people of Dubbo in the cause of Nationalism. (Applause.) He asked them to sink all personal feeling and show a united front to a common enemy. (Applause.) He hoped at some future time to represent the place of his birth in the Parliament. (Applause.)

Mr. Hall acknowledged the generosity of Mr. Blackett in appearing on the platform.

THE NOMINATIONS.

Nominations for the extraordinary vacancy in the Macquarie State Electorate, occasioned by the death of Mr. T. H. Thrower, closed with the returning officer at noon yesterday. Three nominations were lodged as follows:—Francis James Foster, Patrick Michael McGirr, and Murdoch McLeod.

Mr. Foster is ex-member of the Federal Parliament, in which he sat as a Labour member. He is now standing as an independent for the Macquarie State seat. Mr. McGirr is the selected official P.L.L. candidate. Mr. McLeod is the nominee of the National Party, and unsuccessfully contested the seat at the last general election against the late Mr. Thrower.

Polling will take place on Saturday, July 28.
